ESG: social responsibility at work and freedom of expression

Environmental, social and governance (ESG) has become an increasing focus for employers, employee representatives and applicants alike. This session will consider market practices regarding ESG, the importance of employers being aware of the impact and the potential fallout from ESG issues. We will examine the impact of ESG in the workplace; in particular, how ESG can impact an employer's policies and an employee's freedom of expression and how those issues can subsequently be balanced. We will also discuss whether and in what way the implementation of ESG in corporate culture, in the cooperation between employers, employees and employee representatives, and in the area of HR policies, helps to attract applicants and retain employees.

We will notably discuss the key employment and immigration issues to be covered in such a policy together with other challenges involved in implementing such a policy. Breakout session 2

Beyond flexibility: reaping the benefits of a disability confident workforce

While many countries have anti-discrimination and equal opportunity legislation, the employment gap between disabled and non-disabled people remains persistently high and seemingly resistant to any efforts to narrow it. However, with the rise of flexibility in the way we work following the Covid-19 pandemic, this creates a unique opportunity to consider the intersection of technology and disability and reap the benefits of a disability confident workforce. This session will consider the barriers that currently exist, and the opportunities for meaningful progress to reduce the employment gap.

Yvonne Frederiksen Norrbom Vinding, Copenhagen; Conference Quality Officer, IBA Diversity and Equality Law Committee

Breakout session 3

Compensation and benefits: how to effectively draft an MIP in the context of an M&A transaction

Management incentive plans (MIPs) have become a popular way of remunerating, motivating and rewarding employees and management. During this session, we will examine how to best design and implement an MIP in the context of an M&A transaction and examine the benefits of such schemes generally for the business and employees. We will consider the various types of incentive plans that can be offered to employees and management for both short term and long term incentivisation. We will also discuss some of the key considerations in designing and selecting a plan (eg, tax) and how to choose the right scheme depending on the profile of the management personnel and the nature of the business.

Breakout session 4

Mental health: the increase in claims relating to 'burnout' and prevention strategies

The changing workplace and today's way of working brings with it some challenges and considerations for employee mental health and workplace wellbeing. While the benefits of remote and hybrid working have clearly been shown, more than four out of ten workers (44 per cent) say that their work stress has increased as a result of the pandemic, according to one Europe-wide survey. Remote and hybrid working raise issues around facilitating inclusivity and participation in the workforce, combatting isolation, a culture of always 'being on' and other mental health issues. During this session we will discuss the responsibilities on both sides of the employment relationship in respect of protecting and safeguarding the mental health of employees including the extent of an employer's duty to an employee, the responsibilities an employee has, considerations around identifying mental health issues, best practice, and practical tips.

1545 – 1715 Plenary session

Typical discrimination and employment issues in Latin America

The diversity of Latin American cultures – as well as changing demographics, growing migration in search of work and a rapidly changing business environment – have contributed to discrimination in the workplace becoming a key issue in this region. Gender inequality in particular is highlighted as an area of concern. During this session, we will consider whether enough is being done to tackle discrimination and gender inequality. We will look at the latest developments and hot employment law issues in workplaces in this region and will hear the experiences of lawyers practicing in this region on the key considerations from an employer and employee representative perspective, especially with regard to collective labour law.

Supply chain and collective labour law issues in the Americas

The expansion of global supply chains has been driven by a business model expressly designed to take advantage of low wages and inadequate regulation and enforcement. With a trend emerging of companies in the Americas looking to rely less on the manufacturing industry abroad, nearshoring opportunities are opening up. This session will address current issues of collective labour law in North and South America. We will focus on the importance of International Framework Agreements, the permissibility and limits of industrial action, due diligence on the activities of third-party suppliers and changes that have resulted from the global supply chain debate.

Learn more about what defines us:

International Bar Association

the global voice of the legal profession

The International Bar Association (IBA), established in 1947, is the world's leading organisation of international legal practitioners, bar associations, law firms and law societies.

The IBA influences the development of international law reform and shapes the future of the legal profession throughout the world. It has a membership of more than 80,000 individual lawyers and more than 190 bar associations and law societies spanning over 170 countries.

Inspired by the vision of the United Nations, the IBA was founded in the same spirit, just before the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was proclaimed in 1948.

The IBA covers all practice areas and professional interests, providing members with access to leading experts and up-to-date information, enabling them to better represent their clients' interests.

Through its various committees, fora and task forces, the IBA facilitates the exchange of information and views among its members as to laws, practices and professional responsibilities relating to the practice of law around the globe.

IBA Employment and Industrial Relations Law Committee overview

Very few legal fields face the revolutionary changes that employment and industrial relations laws do. Issues such as technology, human rights, globalisation, corporate citizenship and increased movements of people have created unprecedented legal complexity as they interact with traditional laws often formulated decades ago. As the largest of the Human Resource Section Committees of the IBA, the purpose of the Committee is the identification, technical analysis and proactive management of national, regional and global developments in these rapidly evolving fields. The Committee takes a 'cutting edge' approach to its selection of topics and speakers and draws upon the combined experience of its officers and panellists to present the members with innovative solutions to the employment law problems of today.

IBA Diversity and Equality Law Committee overview

The Diversity and Equality Law Committee comprises private practitioners, in-house attorneys and academics, many of whom work with corporate clients in order to help them fulfil their key goals in such areas as pay equity, prevention of discrimination based on gender, race, religion, age, and disability (among other protected traits), and LGBTQ issues.

Many of these professionals are members of leading law firms or corporations. Of course, we welcome members from all areas and with all perspectives.
